I hope I shall have the honour of your intimate acquaintance. We are very glad to see you, Oliver, very! Ah! You're a-staring at the pocket-handkerchiefs! Eh, my dear? There are quite a few of them, ain't there? We've just hung 'em out, ready for the wash. No, this isn't exactly a laundry, my boy. I suppose a laundry would be a very nice thing indeed, but our line of business pays a little better – don't it boys? You see, Oliver . . . in this life, only one thing counts.
